Federal Reserve Cuts Interest Rates For First Time In A Decade

Last week, the U.S. Federal Reserve (America's central bank) cut interest rates for the first time in more than decade amid slowing economic growth and growing uncertainty in U.S.-China trade relations. Despite the Fed's dismissal of the cut as a one-off "midcycle adjustment" in policy, we expect more rate cuts lie ahead. Stay tuned.

U.S. Manufacturing Growth Nears New Decade Low

Last month, a key metric that measures the growth of America's manufacturing activity, known as Manufacturing PMI, tumbled to its slowest pace of growth since September 2009. The figure came in at 50.4, which is just barely above the 50 point threshold that divides expansion from contraction. Any number below 50 indicates that U.S. manufacturing is contracting while any number above 50 indicates an expansion.

Bitcoin Rallies Back Above $10,000 After New 50 DMA Bounce

Bitcoin is now back above $10,000 after its first 50 DMA bounce since breaking out earlier this year. All throughout the 2017 rally, the first several 50 DMA pullbacks served as buy signals. With this being the first 50 DMA pullback since the 2019 breakout, more upside is likely ahead in the near-term.

More Proof That Bitcoin Is Serving As A "Store Of Value"

According to this excellent chart by Coin Metrics, 21.6% of the total Bitcoin supply has not been touched for five or more years. This is a new all-time high and suggests that Bitcoin is increasingly being perceived as a store of value, just as Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell recently confirmed.

LONG-TERM TREND

Long-Term Trend for Long-Term Investors

Market Commentary by Jerry Robinson

The S&P 500 index remains in a Position uptrend, despite the recent selloff, and continues to be supported by a Long-Term uptrend. The S&P 500 suffered its worst weekly loss of 2019 after President Trump slapped fresh tariffs on China a day after the Federal Reserve delivered its first interest rate cut in a decade. While the Fed's policy decision to cut interest rates by 25 basis points was largely in line with Wall Street expectations, Fed Chair Jerome Powell's commentary regarding the rate cut led to a hefty selloff in the market when he appeared to warn investors that this would not be the first of many more interest rates to come. This "tough talk" by Powell was not well received by the markets or by President Trump who ripped the Fed's decision on Twitter, writing: "What the Market wanted to hear from Jay Powell and the Federal Reserve was that this was the beginning of a lengthy and aggressive rate-cutting cycle which would keep pace with China, The European Union and other countries... S&P 500 Suffers Worst Week of 2019, Back At 50 DMA Support

The S&P 500 index remains in a Position uptrend, despite the recent selloff and continues to be supported by a Long-Term uptrend.

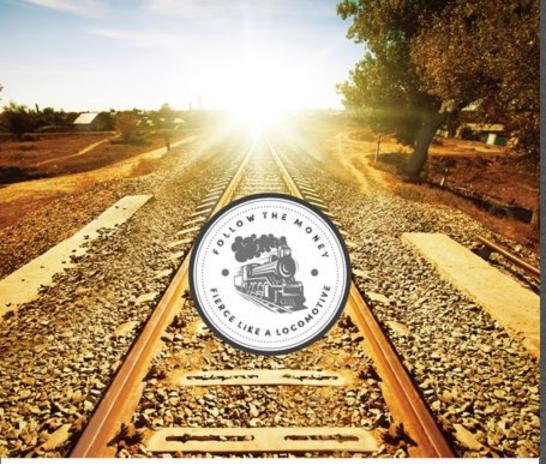

The S&P 500 suffered its worst weekly loss of 2019, tumbling more than 3% last week after President Trump slapped fresh tariffs on China a day after the Federal Reserve delivered its first interest cut rate in a decade.

The index closed at $2932 on Friday. Year-to-date, the index has risen nearly 17%. Read more
