2019 U.S. Budget Deficit Soars Above $1 Trillion

The 2019 fiscal year is not even over and Washington has already managed to spend more than \$1 trillion above its total revenues. This is the first time since 2012 that Washington has allowed its excessive spending to top the $1 trillion mark. While it should be a point of great shame that our nation's policymakers would allow such excess, it comes, ironically, amid an era that President Trump has touted as the "greatest economy ever."

Has anyone stopped to ask how any nation who has to borrow $1 trillion per year can simultaneously boast of having a great economy? On its face, it is completely absurd.

Much of the spending excess is due to the bloated military-industrial complex and rising interest expenses on America's massive public debt. Instead of cutting the fat from an unaccountable Pentagon, the White House has lobbied the Federal Reserve to slash interest rates to zero (and even into negative territory) so as to not force spending cuts in politically sensitive areas. Despite annual trillion dollar deficits expected to continue through at least 2022, no plan is in place to rein in spending.

TRADING IDEA: Vietnam ETF (VNM) Nears 200 DMA Breakout

No one can deny that Asia is an economic powerhouse. China, India, and many other Asian nations are growing at a rapid pace relative to most developed Western nations. Vietnam is one of the fast-growing Asian countries, thanks to its massive population (with nearly 40% of its citizens below the age of 25), low labor costs, and strong manufacturing base. So too, the country has been a direct beneficiary of the current U.S.-China trade war as companies seek to maintain their Asian operations outside of China. One of my favorite ways to gain investment exposure to the rise of Vietnam is through the VanEck Vectors Vietnam ETF \(VNM\).

While VNM has been stuck in a downtrend since topping out near $20 back in early 2018, the ETF is now rising within an ascending triangle pattern after recently bottoming out near $15 in August. Now, VNM is attempting a new 200 DMA breakout with a trigger entry just above the top of its ascending triangle pattern. If VNM triggers, it could rise back to $16.50 in a hurry and on to $17.25 if volume strengthens.

ACTION: We will look to add shares of VNM to our Daily Trading model portfolio as a short term swing trade if the trigger price of $16.12 is reached, with a maximum buy price of $16.35. If triggered, we will immediately place an initial stop-loss order at $15.08.

TRACKING THE TREND IN U.S. STOCKS SINCE 2007

Market Commentary by Jerry Robinson

The S&P 500's Position uptrend is fully intact as it sits just below a new all-time high and is supported by a Long-Term uptrend. The U.S. stock market spent last week climbing higher as the European Central Bank (ECB) launched a new round of quantitative easing and as U.S-China trade tensions appeared to ease with talks between the two countries set to resume in early October. First up, Europe. Last week, the ECB fully committed to looser monetary policy as it cut its key interest rate even deeper into negative territory (-0.5%). Simultaneously, the ECB announced a new €20 billion monthly bond-buying program that officials said would “run as long as necessary” to stimulate the sluggish Eurozone economy. This new preemptive round of monetary stimulus, which is set to begin on November 1, is the largest stimulus measures to be implemented by the ECB in nearly four years. The ECB is just one of many global central banks, including the U.S. Federal Reserve, that has begun fresh monetary... \(Keep reading\)

The S&P 500 index rose 1% last week on rising trade optimism and growing monetary accommodation by global central banks. The closely-watched index is now back within striking distance of a new all-time high.

The index closed at $3007 on Friday, just below the all-time high of $3025 reached in late July. Year-to-date, the index has risen nearly 20.5%. Read more
